

Why should I see an experienced family lawyer before going to Family Dispute Resolution (mediation) in relation to your children?

Family Dispute Resolution (FDR) or mediation in simpler terms is required before you can take your children's matter to Court. The aim of FDR is to help parents (and perhaps extended families) with working out arrangements or resolving issues before they escalate or to de-escalate them if necessary.

So why should you see an experienced family lawyer?

They can:

1. Guide you on where you should compromise and what you should fight for, having regard to what you would likely achieve if your matter went to Court.
2. Advise you as to various options for proposed arrangements
3. Assist you with strategy to obtain your goals.
4. Advise you what other matters you need to consider at mediation
5. Prepare proposed orders for you to take with you to mediation to assist in achieving your goals
