

Why you should have a lawyer prepare your Application for Consent Orders?

1. An experienced family lawyer will give you advice as to whether the agreement reach is “just and equitable” as required by the Family Law Act. They will advise you whether the court is likely to make the orders you seek;
2. Sometimes a lawyer might advise you that the orders you seek the Court makes don’t seem “just and equitable” but can sometimes suggest strategies to obtain the orders sought.
3. They are experienced in completing the required forms and can get them right the first time.
4. They will prepare orders or seek amendments to orders prepared by your ex (or their lawyer) that protect your interests and provide default provisions where applicable if some doesn’t or can’t carry out the orders provided.
5. You don’t have to worry whether you got it right.
